Apartment Safety Tips

As a reminder to you and your registered guests, please note the following safety instructions:

Only authorized visitors, registered guests and residents are allowed in our complexes. Lock your apartment doors every time you leave and while you are home. Guard your personal belongings and personal information. Do not let anyone in laundry rooms or community rooms and be sure the doors are secure when you leave. Report any suspicious activity to UTPD immediately by dialing 911. Err on the side of caution.

Safety and security programs, policies and systems are in place to safeguard the University Apartments. It is up to each of us to do our part to keep our complexes safe.

Reminder About Summer Occupancy

Many students travel throughout the summer. If you have live in guests and leave your apartment for more than 10 days, email the Apartments office with the reason for the absence and expected length of absence at: dhfs.apartments@austin.utexas.edu.

Also:
Per your apartment contract, you are not permitted to sell, sublease or assign your apartment. Those found to be in violation will be referred to the Academic Integrity and Student Conduct Office.

Cody comes from a long line of gardeners. His grandparents maintained a large garden when his grandfather was still alive, and his grandmother continues the tradition on a smaller scale into her nineties. His parents have also transformed their suburban lawn into a vegetable garden which seems to get larger every year.

Cody, and his wife Katherine, were probably inspired to garden by reading Omnivore’s Dilemma, or something similar. Their early attempts at gardening were largely unsuccessful, though they seem to be hitting their stride thanks to the abundant sunlight and wide open spaces of the Colorado Community Garden. Cody is a 4th year PhD student in the Geography Department studying the distribution of Baird’s Tapirs in Central America. He is looking forward to serving as the next Manager of the Colorado Community Garden, and hopes to bring some fresh ideas to the garden.
